Kansas Labor Market Information Services \(LMIS\)

The Kansas Labor Market Information Services (LMIS) division of the Kansas Department of Labor (KDOL) has student resources and information updated every year on their website. They produce Kansas Career Posters, Monthly Spotlights, and a resource called Today's Occupations. They highlight potential career paths across various career clusters. The posters provide examples categorized by now, next, and later which highlight occupations students can obtain immediately after high school along with future jobs they can work towards with more education, training, or work experience. Today's Occupations is a collection of high demand, high wage occupations requiring less than a bachelor's degree. For each occupation you will find annual openings, the average annual growth rate, wage information, training and work experience information, a brief description of the occupation, and potential job titles for the occupation. In addition, you will find a listing of knowledge, skills, abilities, and technology commonly associated with each occupation.
